RedWarn legal

Last updated: 16 February 2021

RedWarn Privacy Policy

Please note this privacy policy only applies to off-Wiki communication with the RedWarn team, and use of RedWarn tools. Since access to this information is fundamental to the operation of Wikimedia Cloud Services, these terms regarding use of your data expressly override the Wikimedia Foundation's Privacy Policy as it relates to the use and access of your personal information.

RedWarn respects your privacy. We will never collect:
- IP addresses
- Login locations
- Passwords
- Real names, Email addresses, or any other personal information unless you choose to provide it, such as by using the SendEmail feature to User:RedWarn

If you opt-in to help with debugging, we may collect:
- Your Wikimedia username
- Information on what features you've used, where you've clicked within RedWarn's interface, etc.
- Browser information

If you choose to provide personal information, such as your name or email address, this information will remain in our internal bug tracking systems indefinitely, but won't be available to anyone outside of the RedWarn team.

RedWarn is based in the United Kingdom, and therefore is legally required to protect your data under the Data Protection Act 2018 (GDPR). This includes the right for your data to be retained in the United Kingdom only. However, unless you explicitly tell us in writing, your data will be available to other team members in the Philippines, the United States of America and Hong Kong (People's Republic of China).

We also use GitLab, which is hosted by Google Cloud Platform in multiple regions.

We are bound to use any data you submit to RedWarn tools, including RedWarn's CDN, per the Wikimedia Cloud Services terms of use at: https://wikitech.wikimedia.org/wiki/Wikitech:Cloud_Services_Terms_of_use

You can request an export, or deletion of all the personal information held about you by emailing: ed6767wiki@gmail.com

If you are not comfortable with sharing your own email address when using the Send Email feature to report bugs and other issues, we highly recommend creating an email account just for Wikimedia related work.

RedWarn software licenses are available at:

- https://gitlab.com/redwarn/redwarn-web/-/blob/master/LICENSE
- https://gitlab.com/redwarn/redwarn-react/-/blob/master/LICENSE
- https://gitlab.com/redwarn/redwarn-tools/-/blob/master/LICENSE

Notice for on-wiki versions:

Compiled on-wiki versions are made available by the copyright holders on Wikimedia projects under the Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 3.0 Unported License.

We, the copyright holders, also authorise you to upload the result of the build script from Apache 2.0 licensed source code to any Wikimedia project.

For all other non-Wikimedia wikis: Rebuilds using the Apache 2.0 licensed source code must be uploaded under an Apache 2.0 compatible license. It is the copyright holders understanding that Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 3.0 Unported is not a compatible license for on-wiki release. That being said, as an open-source project, we welcome collaboration, extensions and translations! Please email ed6767wiki@gmail.com if you need help with licensing RedWarn for another wiki.